DAN SMOOT

FIRST ROLL CALLS, 1965

In this issue, we tabulate 14 important roll call votes taken during the first two months of the 89th Congress—7 in the Senate, 7 in the House. Though definitive ratings cannot be made on so few votes, 7 major votes in each chamber of the national Congress are enough to reveal a discouraging trend: the 89th Congress looks like a rubberstamp for the Johnson administration. Hence, the 50 U. S. Representatives, whose voting is 100% conservative on all 7 roll calls tabulated herein, should be congratulated and encouraged by their constituents.

Water Pollution Control Act Amendments

On January 28, 1965, the Senate, by a stand of 87 to 9 passed S4 (as President Lyndon B. Johnson had requested), to authorize $20,000,000.00 in matching grants to states for water pollution control, during a three-year period ending June 30, 1968. S4 gives the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare limitless authority to establish water quality standards in the United States, the program to be administered by the Federal Water Pollution Control Administration.

The vote is recorded in Column 1 under Senate, C being a conservative stand against.

Nothing in the Constitution authorizes the federal government to engage in such activities as this program provides. Granting an officer of the federal government autocratic power to prescribe and enforce national standards for anything is hostile to constitutional principles which form the bedrock of our society. Moreover, people whose taxes pay for the federal government's water pollution control activities could get a great deal more for their money through private effort or through their local and state governments—if the federal government did not confiscate their money and keep them from using it as they see fit.

Appalachia Bill

On February 1, 1965, the Senate, by a stand of 74 to 26, passed the Appalachian Regional Development Act of 1965, authorizing various "anti-poverty" programs in the region called Appalachia—all of West Virginia, and portions of Alabama, Georgia, Kentucky, Maryland, North Carolina, Ohio, Pennsylvania, South Carolina, Tennessee, and Virginia. The bill authorized a five-year $840,000,000.00 plan to build 3,350 miles of roads and highways, with the states to furnish an additional $360,000,000.00. It also authorized $252,400,000.00 for construction of health facilities, vocational education schools, land improvement, water resources development, mining reclamation, timber development, and so on.

The vote is recorded in Column 2 under Senate, C being a conservative stand against.

The Appalachia program is obviously unconstitutional. For commentary on this, and evidence that the program is also wasteful and harmful, see "The Great Society," the February 15, 1965, issue of this Report.

International Coffee Agreement Implementation

In 1962, the Kennedy State Department took the lead in negotiating the International Coffee Agreement, to regulate price and distribution of coffee, guaranteeing to most coffee-producing nations (including communist Cuba) markets and reasonable prices (but excluding some non-communist countries—notably, Free China). The U. S. Senate ratified without much delay, and the Agreement went into effect on December 31, 1963.

U. S. participation could not be complete, however, until Congress enacted implementing legislation. In urging Congress to enact such legislation, President John F. Kennedy promised that the Agreement would reduce coffee prices for American consumers. The House of Representatives passed an implementation bill in 1963; but, contrary to the President's promise, coffee prices rose in the United States as soon as the Coffee Agreement was adopted. The Senate took no action on an implementation bill in 1963.

On July 31, 1964, the Senate amended and passed HR 8864, the bill which the House had passed the year before. In August, 1964, the House took final action on the implementation bill as amended by the Senate. By that time, there was strong opposition to this government-created, worldwide coffee cartel which benefited communist coffee-producing nations, while discriminating against some non-communist nations. On August 18, 1964, the House rejected the coffee implementation bill.

In 1965, President Johnson again requested the legislation. On February 2, 1965, the Senate, by a stand of 61 to 26, passed S 701, to implement the International Coffee Agreement. The vote is recorded in Column 3 under Senate, C being a conservative stand against.

Aid To Nasser

See p. 4

Well-informed observers say the 1952 coup by which Gamal Abdel Nasser seized power in Egypt was planned and partly financed by the American Central Intelligence Agency. Since then, our government has forced American taxpayers to give or lend Nasser approximately one billion dollars. In 1956, our government saved Egypt from invasion by France, England, and Israel, thus enabling Nasser to confiscate the most valuable property in Egypt, the Suez Canal. Our government's policy toward Nasser has also encouraged American banks to grant Egypt loans, and American industrial firms to sell Egypt, on credit, vast quantities of industrial equipment. American aid to Nasser continues to flow, while Nasser operates as an agent of Soviet foreign policy.

On November 27, 1964, African students stormed the U. S. Embassy in Cairo, and burned the John F. Kennedy Memorial Library. Nasser's government eventually apologized, after the government-controlled press had denounced American policy as "hideous imperialism."

This incident created strong public demand in the United States that our government give no more of our tax money to Nasser.

On January 26, 1965, the House, by a stand of 210 to 183, passed an amendment to HJ Res 234, to prevent the use of any Food for Peace funds for aid to Egypt during fiscal 1965. The Johnson administration denounced this action.

On February 3, 1965, a canvass of the Senate disclosed 46 Senators supporting the amendment to stop aid to Nasser, 45 against it. When the roll was called immediately thereafter, 2 Senators who had taken a stand for the amendment could not be on the floor to vote for it. Consequently, the amendment was defeated; and the Senate, by a vote of 44 to 38, supported the President, authorizing him to use Food for Peace funds for Egypt if he determined that doing so would be in the national interest.

On February 8, 1965, the House, by a stand of 248 to 172, approved the Senate measure, authorizing aid to Nasser during the 1965 fiscal year.

The Senate stand is recorded in Column 4 under Senate; the first House stand, in Column 3 under House; the second House stand, in Column 4 under House—C being a conservative stand for stopping aid to Nasser.

Gold Backing

At the end of World War II, the United States had 60 percent of known gold reserves in the world, and the total of foreign claims against our gold was relatively insignificant. Then, our government began squandering abroad, and pushing private American capital overseas, to build in foreign lands industrial and commercial enterprises which compete with our own. Consequently, as early as 1950, foreign nations—getting more of our money for goods, services, and investments than we were getting of theirs—started accumulating surplus American dollars which could be presented to the U. S. Treasury for redemption in gold.

As foreigners cashed in their American dollars, our monetary gold reserve shrank. By 1961, we had less than half enough in the free pile of our gold reserve to meet foreign claims; but we still had enough gold in the anchor pile to provide 25 percent backing for Federal Reserve notes and for deposit liabilities of Federal Reserve member banks. The Kennedy administration asked Congress to eliminate the anchor pile and permit the U. S. Treasury to pay out our entire gold reserve to foreigners, leaving none to back our domestic currency. Congress refused.

By 1965, foreign claims against our gold had risen to more than 26 billion dollars. Our reserve had shrunk to about 15 billion, almost 14 billion of which was in the anchor pile where it could not be used to meet foreign claims.

On February 9, 1965, the House, by a stand of 312 to 94, passed HR 3818, an administration-supported bill which eliminated the requirement for 25 percent gold backing of Federal Reserve member bank deposit liabilities. This removed about 4.9 billion dollars of gold from the anchor pile, making it available to meet foreign claims. The Senate passed HR 3818, by a stand of 86 to 8, on February 18, 1965.

The Senate vote on HR 3818 is recorded in Column 5 under Senate; the House vote, in Column 5 under House — C being a conservative stand against the weakening of our currency.

The Johnson administration claimed that HR 3818 would slow down the outflow of our gold. But in less than a month after the bill was passed our gold loss in one week was twice as great as our total loss for the entire year 1964. Our gold loss for the year 1964 was $125,000,000. In the week ending March 18, 1965, France alone took approximately $250,000,000 of our gold. The total loss of U. S. gold to all nations during the first two and one-half months of 1965 was $825,000,000.

Inter-American Bank Funds

On February 18, 1965, the House, by a stand of 298 to 102, passed HR 45— a bill authorizing contributions of $750,000,000 to the Inter-American Development Bank during the next three years. The Inter-American Development Bank finances construction and development throughout Latin America — pouring out U. S. taxpayers' money to build industrial plants, irrigation projects, schools, houses, apartments, roads, public works, office buildings — everything. Since the bank was created in 1960, U. S. contributions have totalled $1,136,000,000.

On the day the House passed this administration-sponsored bill to augment the outpouring of American tax money to foreign nations, President Johnson asked American bankers and businessmen to curtail their overseas investments, warning that if they did not do so voluntarily, the government could use force.

On February 25, 1965, the Senate, in two roll call votes, amended and passed HR 45. The amendment, proposed by Senator Wayne Morse (Oregon Democrat), requires the United States to use its voting power on the board of the Inter-American Development Bank (the U. S. has 40 percent of the votes on the board) to disapprove loans in any country which had expropriated American property without compensation. The Senate adopted the Morse amendment by a stand of 63 to 23; passed the amended bill by a stand of 69 to 16.

The Senate vote on the Morse amendment is recorded in Column 6 under Senate, C being a conservative vote for the amendment. The Senate vote on passage of the bill is recorded in Column 7 under Senate; the House vote on passage of the bill, in Column 7 under House—C being a conservative stand against this foreign giveaway of tax money.

President Johnson demands tax money to lend and give away abroad and uses tax money to stimulate the flight of private capital overseas, while simultaneously threatening to force curtailment of foreign spending and lending by American individuals and businesses. HR 45 is part of this strange picture. For details, see "How Long Can We Last?", the March 8, 1965, issue of this Report.

Seating Mississippi Delegation

When the U. S. House of Representatives convened on January 4, 1965, Representative William Fitts Ryan (New York Democrat), supported by liberals from various other states, objected to seating the five Representatives from Mississippi —on grounds that their elections had been challenged by the Freedom Party, a leftwing political group which was formed in Mississippi in the summer of 1964, largely by out-of-state persons. The Freedom Party did not even participate in the November general elections, but held its own mock election instead.

By a stand of 276 to 149, the House voted to seat the elected Representatives from Mississippi, pending formal House investigation of the contested elections. The vote is recorded in Column 1 under House, C being a conservative stand for seating the Mississippi delegation.

For details on this important subject, see "Civil Rights or Civil War?", the February 22, 1965, issue of this Report.

House Rules Changes

On January 4, 1965, the House, by a stand of 225 to 203, made various changes in the rules governing its own procedures. One change enables the Speaker to force the Rules Committee to release a bill which has been in the Committee 21 days or longer. Another abolished the rule that a bill could be sent to conference with members of the Senate only upon unanimous consent of all members present in the House: now a simple majority vote is enough to send a bill to conference. Another removed the rule which permitted any Representative to demand a revised copy of a bill amended on the floor, before a final vote could be taken: now a floor-amended bill can be passed without a final, corrected text being available for members to read before voting.

This vote is recorded in Column 2 under House — C being a conservative stand against rules changes which speed up the legislative process by eliminating opportunities for thoughtful deliberation, careful study, and full debate.

For more comment on this subject, see "The Road Ahead," the January 4, 1965, issue of this Report.

Disarmament Agency Funds

On February 17, 1965, the House, by a stand of 319 to 81, passed HR 2998, a bill authorizing $40,000,000 for the U. S. Arms Control and Disarmament Agency during a three-year period ending with the 1968 fiscal year. This is $13,333,333 a year for the Agency, which originally received $10,000,000 a year.

The vote is recorded in Column 6 under House, C being a conservative stand against.
